

Using a GCM to investigate the capability of a satellite instrument to measure wind and ozone in the stratosphere

Authors: Charles McLandress

Presenter: Charles McLandress

University of Toronto

Brief Abstract:

The Canadian Middle Atmosphere Model is used to investigate the precision necessary for making useful satellite measurements of horizontal winds and ozone in the stratosphere. Tropical planetary waves, zonal mean winds, and the meridional flux of ozone are examined.